"PIONEER DAY" PROGRAM HELD

Eighty Attend Luncheon Of Shakespeare Club Held On Tuesday

Almost a score of pioneer ladies of the county met with the Placerville Shakespeare Club Tuesday for their annual pot-luck luncheon remembering "Pioneer Ray." There were eighty at the luncheon tables.

Among the honored guests were Mrs. Mary Swansborough, Mrs. Dora Crawford, of Georgetown; Mrs. Ella De Wolfe, Mrs. Nevada Childs, Mrs. Flora Stacy, Mrs. Minnie Marks, Mrs. Sarah Sexton, Mrs. Mary McBeth, Miss Mary O'Donnell, Mrs. William Veerkamp, of Gold Hill; Mrs. Minnie Gilmore, Mrs. Mary Patterson, Mrs. Laura Schiff, Mrs. A. Baumhoff and Mrs. S. E. Larsen.

A distinguished visitor was Mrs. Helen Haslam, of Cool, president of the Tri-County Federation.

The program opened with community singing of old-time songs following which the club president, Mrs. R. A. Sinclair, expressed a welcome to the honored guests and other visitors and presented Mrs. Haslam, who spoke briefly.

The tri-county president spoke concerning a song which she has composed for the clubs of the tri-county federation which now includes thirteen women's clubs, in Placer, Nevada and El Dorado Counties.

In the pioneer theme, Mrs. Mary Bennett reported on a trip taken last summer by Miss Nancy Vernon, of Coloma, during which she visited in New York City and had opportunity to renew her acquaintance with Edwin Markham, formerly a teacher in the county schools and

Regains Husband

Mrs. Natalia Modzelewska and baby Andre, 2½, arriving in Jersey City, N. J., aboard the President Garfield, receive a cablegram from London announcing that her husband is alive and safe in England. She had given him up for dead when the Polish ship Slaska, on which he was an officer, struck a mine and sank at sea in August.

"STAG NIGHT" FOR LIONS

"French Army" Pays Off For Trailing In First Half Of Attendance Race

The Lions held an evening meeting Tuesday marking the half-way mark in the thirty-two week attendance contest which is being conducted under the chairmanship of Lion Roy Strum.

The "French army," consisting of those of the club whose last names begin with "M" or letters beyond that in the alphabet, were hosts to the "British army," which consists of those of the club whose last names start with "A" or other letters down to "L."

Chairman Strum reported that the attendance contest has had the effect of increasing the club's average about eight points, although the French average was less than sixty per cent and the British was several points below eighty per cent.

Next Tuesday the club embarks on the second half of the race, each group starting from scratch and each hoping to do better.

The speaker of the evening was O. H. Close, superintendent of the Preston School of Industry at Ione, who spoke concerning the rehabilitation of delinquents, juvenile and adult, and was outspoken in his support of a state-wide probation system "similar to our school system" in that it ought to be centrally administered for standardization, but locally controlled.

Lion Thomas Maul introduced three contests, a beauty contest which was won by Lion Perry Tracy; a story-telling contest which saw Lloyd A. Raffetto crowned king, and a "tissue-paper marathon," won by John H. Palmer.

Lion Jack Roberts favored the meeting with several accordion numbers and President L. R. Armes was in the chair.

Birthday Remembered At Surprise Dinner

Tuesday evening Mrs. Gladys Truscott was hostess for a surprise birthday dinner for Miss Teresa Akin. The evening was spent playing games. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Peterson, Mrs. Otto Weichold, and Mr. and Mrs. Russell Anderson.

The ladies of the Shakespeare Club are making plans for an evening of whist at the clubhouse on Tuesday evening, January 30th.

FORESTERS END CONFERENCE

Group Recommends That County Area Be Used In Tests Which Are Planned

A recommendation to the state committee on farm-forest management that El Dorado County be included as one of the areas for the carrying out of tests and demonstrations which the committee may plan in the interest of improving the management of small privately owned timber holdings was the outgrowth of a two-day conference of foresters which adjourned on Tuesday afternoon.

The meeting, held at the Mt. Danaher station of the State Division of Forestry, concluded with a tour of sections of the county in which, it was estimated, there would be 200,000 acres of land containing some privately owned timber which might be benefited by such a program.

This area, the conference indicated, would lie immediately west of the national forest boundary, extending on the north side of the county as far westerly as the Mother Lode highway and approaching that line on the south side of the county.

Parties to the conference were C. R. Tillotson, of the regional U. S. Forest Service headquarters at San Francisco; Arnold N. Weber, of Eldorado Forest; R. H. Weidman, field superintendent of the Institute of Forest Genetics; T. A. Plair, conservation forester; Glenn Paxton, area conservationist and H. M. Lumsden, conservation forester, of the Soil Conservation Service; John Callaghan and Ranger Willard Austin, of the State Division of

Pair Guilty Of Spotlighting

Justice Court Trial Nets Duo $300 Fines Or Jail Terms Of 150 Days Each

Lester Hall and Rufus A. Williams, of Pollock Pines, who had been cited January 5 by game wardens on charges of hunting by spotlight, were found guilty in a jury trial Wednesday morning before Justice of the Peace T. F. Lewis and fined $300 each. In lieu thereof, each is sentenced to jail for 150 days.

Hall was the only witness for the defense and explained they were "just looking around" when game wardens came upon them at eight o'clock at night.

The case was prosecuted by District Attorney Robert E. Roberts.

On the jury were C. E. Barker, Lida Frey, Sam Hern, C. E. Cribbs, C. N. Chalder, B. E. Hefner, Jack Crosland, J. A. Dugan, Bert Pierroz, Frank Scherrer, Matt Miller and Edwin A. Green.

MORE THAN 200 COMMUNITY EVENTS SCHEDULED IN STATE IN '40

SAN FRANCISCO. — California will enjoy more than its quota of fairs, fiestas, rodeos and celebrations during 1940, according to the Travel Committee of the State Chamber of Commerce, whose new Fairs and Fiestas Bulletin listing these gala events is just off the press.

Some 200 annual celebrations are already set for the year, with many more to come. Events include county and district fairs, blossom festivals, historical pageants, flower shows, dog shows, pilgrimages, barbecues, all known sports events and special crop celebrations, and the ever popular rodeo.

"Peculiar to California," states A. E. Goddard, chairman of the travel committee, "is the geographical arrangement that permits travelers to attend either a ski jumping tournament or a polo match on the same weekend. Our residents and visitors can enjoy golf, regattas, desert rides or almond blossom festivals within two hours drive of winter sports, almost anywhere in California."

Copies of the bulletin may be obtained without charge at offices of the California State Chamber of Commerce in San Francisco, Los Angeles, Sacramento, Santa Rosa, Stockton and Fresno.

Mrs. George H. Thompson was at San Francisco the fore part of the week, registered at The Clift.

Finns Put Santa's Helper to Work

Reindeer, associated in American minds with the jovial duty of helping Santa Claus, are being put into war service in Finland, working as beasts of burden in the frozen north. Here, a family fleeing from a Russian bombing raid on the town of Tervola employs a reindeer to draw the sled carrying all that remains of the household's worldly possessions.

Winter Grips Most Of Nation

12-Inch Snowfalls In Far East Delays Traffic; Texas, Georgia Shiver

SAN FRANCISCO, (UP)—California weather conditions were well mixed today, with cloudy conditions prevailing in the north, rains along the north coast, fair weather in the south and frosts forecast for tonight throughout the state.

A rainstorm which broke a cold spell over the weekend moved out, leaving light precipitation in most areas and additional snow in the mountains.

The storm turned into an electrical disturbance along the southern California beaches, producing lightning and rain close to cloudburst proportions last night. Damage was minor.

By UNITED PRESS

Winter held almost the entire country in an icy grip Wednesday as heavy snows blanketed the south and east and another sub-zero wave moved down from the Arctic circle.

From the Texas Panhandle to middle Georgia southerners slipped and skidded to work in one of the most severe cold spells the south has endured in a decade.

In the far east snowfalls up to 12 inches delayed traffic. In the middlewest temperatures dropped abruptly and threatened to go even lower than the near-record depths of last week.

An ominous note came from the Pittsburgh area, where ice gorged rivers and conditions paralleled those preceding the disastrous 1936 flood. A sudden thaw and rain now might mean repetition of the disaster.

The new cold wave plunged the mercury to 16 below zero at Spirit Lake, Ia., Casper, Wyo., reported 11 below and Kansas City -2. The temperature at St. Louis was 8 above and dropping fast. Zero or below was forecast for Chicago Wednesday night and even colder Thursday.

MAN REPORTING "SOS" IS HELD GUILTY OF DRUNKENNESS

EDGARTOWN, Mass., (UP)—Capt. Byron C. Brown, retired army officer, was adjudged guilty of drunkenness in District Court today although he said that he was "cold sober" last night when he claims he heard a distress call from a ship sinking with 147 persons aboard.

Judge A. L. Braley released Brown on $200 bail and continued the case one week for disposition. Brown had pleaded not guilty.

Racing Figure Ordered Returned To Ohio

SACRAMENTO, (UP)—Extradition papers returning Marion (Slim) Webb, former turfman and racing figure, to Ohio were signed by Gov. Culbert Olson.

Webb, convicted of slaying Judge Frederick Gerhardy, Akron track judge and sentenced to a life term in 1924, walked away from an Ohio prison honor camp last October.

Snowline vs Forest Service; Eagles vs Cougars; Mac's Jumbos vs American Legion; Mosquito bye.

Basketball, which statistics show has a larger following over the Nation than football despite the several Saturdays when mammoth stadiums are filled to capacity, is gaining a substantial foothold of public support in El Dorado County.

Attendance at the county league games, of which three rounds of the schedule have been played, has been gaining each week and the fans who saw the third round of the schedule Tuesday night at the high school auditorium were more than rewarded for their attendance.

In the opener, the American Legion slipped over a 20 to 19 win on the Forest Service. The Eagles coasted to a 47 to 10 win over Mosquito in the second game in the wind-up, Snowline CCC camp battled Macs Jumbos to win, 26 to 21.

Next Tuesday night, principal interest centers in the attempt of the Cougars to clip the Eagles' wings..

There will be a little argument, too, between Snowline and the Forest Service, for there is nothing the Snowliners would rather do—unless it be defeat Mosquito—than to defeat the Forest Service.

The third game for next Tuesday night will be a neat little mix-up between Mac's Jumbos and the American Legion.

In this week's series it was 8 to 4 for the Forest Service at the Club Meeting Wednesday Observes Anniversary Of Gold Find At Coloma

The regular Wednesday luncheon meeting of the Soroptimists Club, held at Hotel Raffles, added one new member to the club roster when Miss Emerie Rudland was initiated.

In observance of the day, which was the ninety-second anniversary of the discovery of gold at Coloma by James W. Marshall, the club heard a talk on the history of the covered wagon and pioneer days by Mrs. Eva Carpenter.

Business of the meeting, for which Mrs. June Chemnitz, president, was in charge, included endorsement of the current finance campaign in support of health work against infantile paralysis and the club especially endorsed the "March of Dimes" feature of the campaign and made plans to render an active assistance in this work.

Balkan Oil Controversy Likely To Spread War; Japs Irked At U. S.

HELSINKI, (UP) — A big Russian offensive northeast of Lake Ladoga failed yesterday for the third successive day, with heavy slaughter among the attacking Red army troops, an official Finnish communique claimed today.

All Russian attacks were repulsed, the communique said.

The Russians used infantry, tanks and airplanes, supported by powerful artillery, in their attacks.

By UNITED PRESS

Diplomatic conflict involving Europe, the United States and Japan overshadowed action on the war fronts today except for continued vain pounding by the Red army on Finland's main defense lines.

Resentment was reported increasing in Tokyo against both the United States and Great Britain as a result of preparations to permit the American trade treaty to lapse on Friday without a temporary agreement and as a result of the British seizure of German seamen from Japanese ships.

There were indirect threats that Japan's relations with the United States might soon be under excessive strain because many Japanese have taken the position that abandonment of the trade treaty was designed primarily as an American move to undermine Japan's "new order" in East Asia.

The Japanese controversy with Britain was more in the open and more spectacular, but it did not appear likely that Japanese protests would affect the British policy of

Naval Maneuvers Off Dutch Isles

Diplomatic Importance Attached To Gathering Of Atlantic Squadron

By T. F. REYNOLDS
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, (UP) — American naval maneuvers off the Dutch West Indies suggested today that the navy may be preparing to defend the strategic Caribbean Islands if Holland is drawn into the European war.

President Roosevelt revealed at his press conference that 22 naval vessels maneuvering in the Caribbean will operate off and out of the Dutch Islands of Curacao, Aruba, Bonaire and St. Eustatius. He insisted that essembly of the Atlantic squadron in the Caribbean was only a routine training maneuver.

The navy and state department refused to comment. Diplomatic circles, however, speculated that naval maneuvers near the Dutch Islands following recent Dutch mobilization on the German border might be more than coincidence.

"Scotty" Allan Club Speaker

Noted Alaskan, Associate Editor Of Pony Express Courier Booked For Feb. 13

Alexander A. "Scotty" Allan, noted Alaskan traveler and lecturer and associate editor of The Pony Express Courier, published in Placerville, will be the guest speaker on February 13th at the meeting of the literary section of the Shakespeare Club.

This is according to an announcement made Wednesday by Mrs. Eva Carpenter, chairman of the section.

Mr. Allan's long experience in Alaska and his knowledge of the handling of the famous Alaskan Husky dogs won him an important World War assignment in which he was in charge of more than 400 dogs used in military service by the French government. And, as is well known, he was active in an advisory capacity in the outfitting and equipping of the first Byrd expedition to the South Pole.

Mr. Allan is making plans for an overnight stay in Placerville and with this in mind, the literary section of the club is endeavoring to arrange an evening reception in his honor at the clubhouse, to which members of the club will be welcome to invite their husbands or escorts.

This evening meeting would be in addition to the Literary Section meeting at the usual hour in the afternoon.

SCHOOL GIRL AND BOY FRIEND DENIED ARMY AIR THRILLS

SAN FRANCISCO (UP)—A schoolgirl's request that she and her boy friend be taken for a ride on one of the army's giant bombers during theoretical raids on California cities was turned down, with regrets, today by army officials.

Lt. Arthur Jones, Jr., public relations officer at Hamilton Field bombing base, explained when the planes are flying on war or mock war missions "little girls and little boys, even though they try to keep quiet and out of our way would really interfere."

"Besides that you see, there is no place for little girls in war airplanes —it still is a man's business," he wrote.

Jones' letter was addressed to Elizabeth Ann Maynard, 10, 2090 Beach St., San Francisco and formerly of Napa, where she was born and reared.

Elizabeth Ann wrote air corps headquarters asking for a ride for herself and Hampton Peterson, 1844 Pine St., Napa.

She said he is 12½ and her "boy friend." She explained he was coming over to visit her over the weekend and by way of entertainment she thought it would be nice if the army would take them up in one of the planes.

"I have been hearing your air raids every morning and I wanted to know if Hampton and I might accompany one of the men in the airplanes if there is a raid at that time," she wrote. "I have a feeling you will say no because it's against the rules and regulations.

"I've never been on an airplane and I don's know about Hampton. If we would come we would try not to be any trouble."

In a postscript she explained she asked that an answer get to her before 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

The Aga Khan, spiritual ruler of some 10,000,000 peoples and noted Anglo-Indian sportsman, has decided to sell his stable of racing horses. He has been racing in England since 1920, and it is estimated he has spent more than $4,000,000 on horses since that time.

His horses won the Derby three times—Blenheim in 1930, Bahram in 1935 and Mohmoud in 1936. But coupled with his successes were failures, also. For instance, he paid $120,000 for the yearling Feridoon and sold the horse two years later for $75.

The Aga Khan has maintained breeding studs in France, England and Ireland. His horses are all trained at Newmarket, England, by Frank Butters. Reasons for selling his stable were said to be the reduction of racing prizes and the consequent lowering of bloodstock.

The nearest living descendant of Mohamet, the Aga Khan is one of the richest of Indian princes. He is an astute diplomat and politician, and was elected president of the League of Nations Assembly in 1937. He is the religious head of the Ismaili Kojas sect of Mohamedanism in India, Africa, Asia and the Far East.

Born in Mecca in 1877, the Aga Khan received a thorough training in Persian and the religions of the East. He speaks Arabic, English and other continental languages in addition to several Eastern tongues.

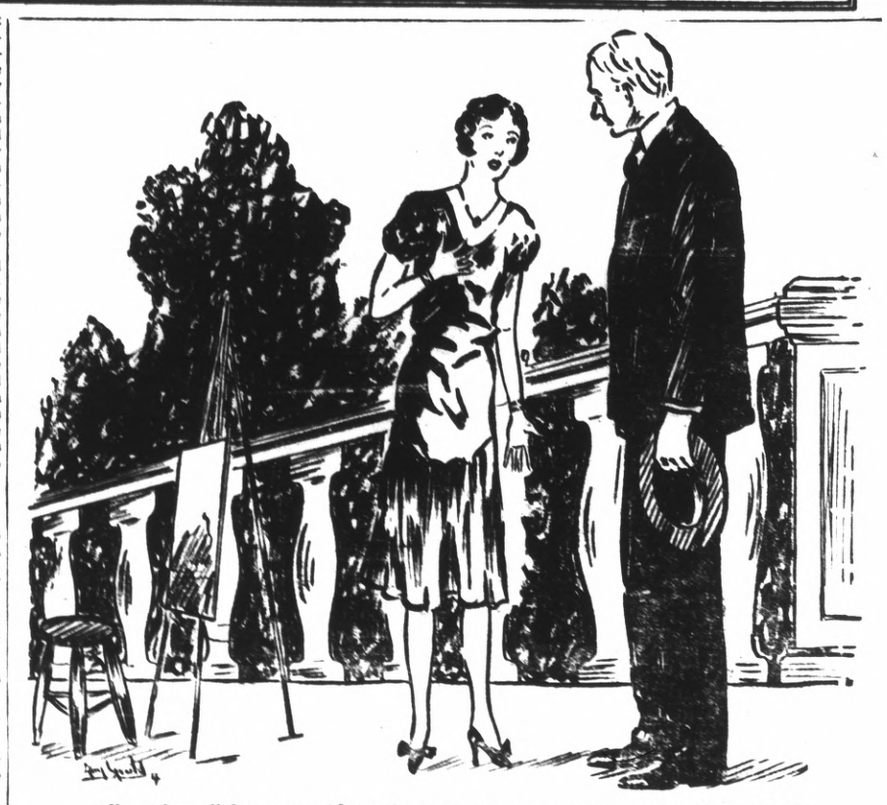

One of his greatest accomplishments was abolishment of caste restrictions. In the province of Baroda no man is untouchable. Then as a part of his jubilee celebration the Aga Kahn made a gift of $3,750,000 to improve sanitary conditions and reduce malaria among his peoples.

His first wife died in 1926 and three years later he married Mlle. Andree Carron, French employe of a Paris perfumery shop.

The Aga Khan in his younger years was an active participant in various sports. He likes to box and even took sparring partners with him on his many trips. He likes golf and billiards, but does not care for card games. Thackeray and Dickens are among his favorite authors.

"More Than Love"
by LEWIS ALLEN BROWNE
COPYRIGHT BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

Leland Forbes had never met Jeanette Morse until they accidentally become acquainted in Virginia. They promptly fall in love with each other and plan an early marriage. In their short courtship Leland has not mentioned his sister, Lola, who is his twin and the only other one of his family left. She has a baby boy and is married to Vance Harlow, a worthless brute. She suddenly comes to Leland a few days before his planned marriage, begging him to hide her as she has killed her husband. With no witnesses and knowing that her husband's relatives who hated her would perjure themselves to send her to the chair, Leland writes a mysterious farewell note to Jeanette and hides with his sister in the Blue Ridge mountains. Jeanette still has faith in him. On day a man who is evidently a detective rides up to the door of their little house in the woods. Leland tells his sister to hide while he goes out to face the man.

"Mr. Adams," Jeanette said, imploringly, "you must tell me where Leland is."

CHAPTER IV.

The stranger looked keenly at Leland as he stepped out of the door and closed it behind him. Then he grinned.

Leland did not miss the grin. The man felt rather sure of himself, Leland decided.

"Well," he said, "you're not a native—that's plain."

In a flash Leland had his tip-off as to what to do.

"Howdy," Leland said, "what mought yore business be, stranger?"

The man stared at him in amazement.

"What's that?" hhe demanded sharply.

Leland realized that the man was surprised and puzzled at this.

"Who air you-all and what you-all want?" Leland demanded, with the nasal twang of the mountaineers. "We don't set no store by furriners down in these yere parts."

The well-dressed stranger eyed Leland keenly, from head to foot.

"No offense," he said.

"What is hit you-all seeks?" Leland persisted, getting courage now at the success of his ruse and scowling at the man.

"I'm merely prospecting for coal—no offense meant," he declared.

"No coal here, hit's yonder, up Radford way, seventy mile from this yere valley."

Leland did not believe the man's story that he was prospecting for coal, not only because he had all the ear-marks of a detective, but because he should have known that the nearest coal was either at Radford or Ivanoe Furnace, towns seventy-five miles apart and equally as far from Grayson Hills.

"Sorry," the man said and he swung up into his saddle and rode away.

Leland went inside and told his sister to keep hidden as he was going to tell Harvey Orson. He set up through the woods and told him about it.

"I think he's a revenuer and I wanted to warn you, and anyway you know I don't want strangers down here."

"I'll be right pert in seein' about it, Mister Fo'bes," Harvey Orson promised. Leland smiled grimly. Whoever the man was, Orson and his neighbors would soon send him on his way. If the man was a detective his badge would work him more harm than good for to those people a badge is the sign of but one thing, a revenue officer—and a revenue officer in those parts held down a very unhealthy job.

Lola was almost sick over the fright. To her there still lurked the grim shadow of the electric chair. The fear of capture had never quite left her.

Leland's mind was often in a turmoil. He would have spells of thinking of Jeanette, of trying to plan some means of letting her know that he was alive and loved her, but no plan would come to him that didn't carry with it too great a degree of danger, according to his views.

Much as he longed to secure copies of newspapers that carried the story of the shooting of Vance Harlow, he never dared to send for them or even to ask his friend and lawyer to do that, for he didn't want him to suspect that his sister was with him.

Poor Jeanette! When proofs of the material that Leland had sent, in his roundabout way, to the Maxin & Company house were given to her to illustrate, she always had a day or so of suffering, mental agony. These proofs meant that somewhere Leland was alive, and there was something direful in his hiding. But Jeanette was no fictional heroine to faint and droop and pine away. She finally went on with her work.

When the first volume came to Leland—the first since he had gone into hiding and had used the pen name of Paul Justin—his sister saw that he was in great distress.

She did not suspect that it was over the handsome illustrations because he knew that Jeanette had made them. She thought it was because he had to use a false name on his work.

"Leland, I'm miserable over your sacrifice," she told him, one day. "I cannot let it go on."

"Everything is serene. When Sunny is about five we'll get out of here and settle in some little Italian town, don't worry," he would say.

"But it is all because I was such a blind fool. I knew that you never liked—the man I married. I knew when you warned me, that you were sincere, but I was in love—or I thought that I was and because I let my heart run away with my head I have ruined my life and yours."

"Hush, there is no question of my duty to my sister. We all err at times—I'll see you through," he would scold at her in his mild way.

He would have been surprised and miserable if he had known of the many nights she wept because of this thing—and not a tear was for the dead Vance Harlow. To her the tragedy was that she had ruined her beloved brother's career and had upon her soul the horrible knowledge that she had killed her son's father.

What if little Leland should learn the truth in after years? He would never quite know the circumstances.

She talked to Leland about this now and then, making sure that the little boy was asleep, for he was beginning to understand words and even at this tender age something might cling to his memory.

Over and over, with great patience, for he knew how she was suffering, Leland pointed out to his sister that once in Italy they would adopt new names and the little boy would never know.

Jeanette, miserable yet brave, again went down to Wytheville and out to the beautiful home that belonged to Leland. Old black Mose and Violet welcomed her.

She remained there for weeks, making photographs of birds and also making her colored drawings for the colored book plates. Day after day she would go over some of the territory where she and Leland had wandered, and she had to fight to keep from running away. She stayed on, telling herself that it was because of the abundance of birds for her to photograph, but in reality it was because she had a constant hope that some day Leland would come back—back here to this little home he loved so well.

And if he did come, she told herself, she would go to him and comfort him and never ask him a question.

One day a clean-cut appearing man drove up to the place in an expensive car. Jeanette was on the west porch, her easel set up, busily at work coloring some drawings of birds. These had to be rushed up to the publishing house.

Old Mose went down to see him as he came up the walk. He caught sight of Jeanette and, hat in hand, he approached her.

"Are you Miss Morse?" he asked.

"Why yes—how did you know? You—you must know something of Leland—of Mr. Forbes!"

Jeanette's heart beat rapidly.

"Yes, I know him."

"I have every right to know about him—where is he? I knew that if you knew my name you knew him."

"I do not know where he is, Miss Morse. I—I used to be his lawyer. I was driving through and decided to come and question the colored people who are the keepers."

He handed her his card.

"Mr. Adams," Jeanette said, imploringly, "you must tell me where Leland is. It doesn't matter what he has done, I must go to him. I can help him. I have implicit faith in him."

"I cannot tell you—I am searching for him myself."

Adams was doing what he thought was right, following orders, but he was secretly sorry and also angry at Leland for forcing him into this situation.

Jeanette did not know whether to believe him or not, but she decided that it would be useless to let him think that she distrusted him.

Adams remained over night. He went through some of Leland's papers. This was necessary in the handling of Leland's affairs. It made Jeanette more suspicious than ever.

"Well," he said, the next afternoon, as he prepared to leave, "I have been through everything. I know no more about it now than I did before."

Jeanette was convinced then that Adams was telling the truth, and was there solely to look for clues as to Leland's whereabouts.

But after he had gone she found, in the library, a great folio that had been taken down and left open. It was open at a map of Grayson County, a county that adjoins Wythe County.

Why had this lawyer been studying the map of the adjoining county?

Could it mean anything?

Jeanette began to make veiled inquiries about Grayson County whenever she was in the town shopping or at the post office mailing her material.

Williams, the station master at the railroad station, told her considerable about Grayson County.

"It's mostly hills and woods and mountaineers, Miss," he said. "They make the best moonshine in the state up there and they can hide out so's no revenuer can git 'em. They come into town often, especially in the Fall, selling a bag of chestnuts for five dollars and inside the chestnuts is a gallon of fine moonshine."

Jeanette was unusually interested. If the Grayson Hills in Grayson County provided a perfect hiding place for moonshiners, why not for Leland?

She knew that he was acquainted all through this district. When they had been up at Chimney Rocks, that memorable day Leland proposed, he had pointed out the heavily wooded, deep-valleyed Grayson Hills and told her of his friends there, the mountaineers.

There was, she learned, a prosperous farmer, a Dutchman, near the station of Crocketts. His name was Baumgartener. He had a sort of public inn in connection with his farm.

Jeanette decided that there was nothing to lose in making a try. She could always be photographing birds and keeping on with her work. She packed her little car with many supplies and drove up to Crocketts. She found the farm and was taken in and given a rather good room.

Day after day she drove her little light car here and there into the mountain roads. Several times she was lost or belated and the mountaineers would put her up.

But they never said a word to her of knowing a man who wrote about birds, or that such a man was hiding there, although she always explained that she was photographing birds.

At one place an old crone by the fireplace, smoking her pipe, upon being told that the girl was "taxin' pitchers of chickadee birds" showed interest.

"You-all furriners set a store on birds, I take it," she said.

"Why?" Jeanette asked quickly and she caught the younger woman nudging the old crone.

She could get no more information but she became hopeful.

Often she would ask, "I suppose plenty of strangers come here to study the song birds?"

She even asked Harvey Orson's wife this question. The woman shook her head.

"Never heered of hit," she asserted, loyally.

One day Jeanette got to the top of a wooded knoll and her car could get no further. She took her camera and walked down a trail to a small house.

A baby boy was todding about inside a little yard. And then a man came out of the house. Jeanette stared at him.

"Leland!" she cried.

He had just lifted the baby out of the little yard. He wheeled and stared at Jeanette and almost dropped the baby. Lola had followed him out and saw Jeanette.

"Take Leland," he said, handing over the baby to Lola.

"'Ook, mama, 'ook!" the youngster cried, pointing at Jeanette. A stranger was a curiosity to him.

"Mama? Leland? Is she—" Jeanette hesitated.

In a flash Lola felt that this girl had some chim on her brother, she saw it in his eyes, in the face of Jeanette.

"No, no," Lola said, excitedly and eager to explain, "we are not married!"

"Hush, Lola," Leland said and started toward Jeanette.

But after one gasp at Lola's words she turned and ran.

Leland hurried after her but she raced over the knoll, got into her car, turned it and drove away before he could overtake her. His pleading shouts for her to wait only spurred her to make more speed.

To Be Continued.

Now that Jeanette has located Leland, what will happen? How will she size up this situation with Leland, a woman and a baby? Don't fail to read the next instalment.

Kuhn's Successor?

London reports the U. S. secret service has received information that Alfred Frauenfeld, Austrian Nazi, has been appointed to succeed Fritz Kuhn as leader of the German-American Bund. Kuhn was jailed recently for theft.

intercepting Germans of military age wherever possible.

London also was facing new difficulties in the Balkans in connection with the Allied attempts to complete their blockade of Germany and especially of materials for the Nazi war machine. Of these materials, oil is perhaps the most important. Germany has been fighting desperately to get the lion's share of Rumanian oil. Normally the Reich takes roughly one quarter of the Rumanian production (about 150,000 tons a month) but efforts have been made to increase this amount by a combination of threats and friendly promises.

The Allies are using the same methods in an efofrt to cut into the German share as much as possible. That the Balkan conflict will spread seemed certain.

Sports Parade

By HENRY McLEMORE

SAN FRANCISCO, (UP) — Every once in a while, and to the eternal gratification of the sports writers, there comes along in sport a player with that intangible something called color.

There is no putting of the finger on color, so I am quite unable to tell you why a boy from Houston, Jimmy Demaret, has—shall we call it "oomph?"—when he walks out on a golf course. But that he does have it was proved here Sunday when he played, and defeated, a native son, Willie Goggin, in the final round of the national match play championship.

The big crowd of San Franciscans, who had been with Goggin 100 per cent in his march to the final, wavered in its loyalty when he played Demaret. There was something in the Texan's walk, his grin as wide as a prairie, his happy attitude to the game, and his unstudied graciousness toward his opponent, that softened the defeat of the home town boy.

I've known Demaret (and he pronounces it the same way you do the things you bad children used to get in grammar school for misbehavior) since he came to Pinehurst, N. C., in 1936 for the National P. G. A. championship. The older and more celebrated professionals had never even heard of him when he arrived, but he hadn't hit ten balls off the practice tee before they were2gathering behind him, admiring and studying his golfing form.

In that tournament he carried the then national open champion, Tony Manero, to the 23rd hole before losing, and Manero, as well as all the other pros, had tagged him as a youngster to watch.

The next time I saw him was in a bitter match with Gene Sarazen in the 1937 P. G. A. free-for-all at Shawnee-on-the-Delaware. The two battled on even terms through eighteen holes and went on into a sudden death battle. Sarazen was playing straight, beautiful golf and Demaret was scrambling for his pars. On the third or fourth extra hole Sarazen had a difficult, curling, five-foot putt for a win, but before he could stroke the putt Demaret walked up and conceded it by knocking it away.

Sarazen wanted to know why Demaret would concede such a tough putt, particularly when it meant his defeat.

Jimmy grinned and answered.

"Listen, Gene, you've been playing beautiful golf all day and I've been lucky to stay this far. When I'm playing this way I don't deserve to win and you do. So let's get back to the clubhouse."

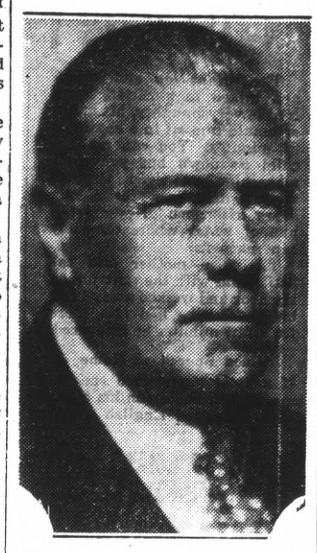

Jimmy is still giving long putts to his opponents. Three or four times during his match with Goggin on Sunday he conceded Willie putts that any other golfer in the game (with the possible exception of Hagen, whom he resembles closely in fairways behavior) would have insisted he holed or missed.

I asked him if he planned to keep giving away putts forever and he said: "Listen, Henry, this is a game we're playing, isn't it? You give putts of that distance in a friendly game, don't you? Well, I don't aim to play golf any way but friendly."

By the time he closed out Goggin the crowd was just as much for the happy Texan as it was for Goggin. Without trying, without knowing it, he had won over 4,000 Californians, and if you know Californians you will appreciate what a feat that was.

Demaret loves golf, but better still he has a zest for living. It shows through his every action. Maybe that's the answer to color.

Envoy of Mercy

Marking a new contribution by President Roosevelt to the cause of world peace is the appointment of Myron C. Taylor (above), former head of the U. S. Steel Corporation, as representative of the United States at the Vatican. The appointment coincides with the efforts of Pope Pius XII to bring peace to war-ridden Europe.

then superintendent of the schools of the county, whose poem "The Man With The Hoe" brought him national recognition.

Miss O'Donnell was called upon by the president and responded with another of her very interesting talks concerning early days in Placerville. Her subject on this occasion began with the opportunities for amusement and entertainment in old Hangtown which centered in her father's theater, the Empire, for which the present theater of that name is named.

Miss O'Donnell exhibited some pictures of early-day scenes in the community and at Coloma, and spoke briefly of Marshall's discovery of gold at Coloma, and of the importance of that event in the establishment of California as a state in 1850.

An original play by Mrs. Eva Carpenter, "The New Piano," was presented by a cast of members of the club including Mrs. Hattie Amstalden, Mrs. Mary Hand, Mrs. Nora Gray, Mrs. H. E. $12,392 JOB INSURANCE PAID IN COUNTY FOR DECEMBER

Representing an increase of $738.-801.02 over December, 1938, 341.-672 unemployed California workers received $3,612,112.94 in Unemployment Insurance Benefits during December, 1939, Ford Park, manager of the Placerville office of the Department of Employment, announced today.

According to Park, this increase in benefit payments is attributable largely to the liberalized benefit structure now in effect.

Out of state claims paid to benefit recipients from other states amounted to $153,931.47, representing but 4.3 per cent of the total, Park said.

Unemployment Insurance benefits to 1,024 claimants in the Placerville area were $12,392 for December.

HEIGHT OF PRECAUTION

CHICAGO, (UP) — The height of precaution, states the current issue of Field Museum News, is exemplified by the African warthog. "This suspicious creature," according to the News bulletin, "fears to take its eyes from the direction of possible approach of its enemies, so it always backs intoETAOI row."

DWARF APPLE TREE

GENEVA, N. Y., (UP) — A dwarf apple tree has recently been developed by the New York State Experiment Station, according to Dr. H. B. Turkey, a horticulturist. The tree, about as tall as a man can reach, is reported to bear fruit the first or second year after planting.

Broiled Ham
Macaroni with Brown Butter Sauce and Paprika
Canned Peas, Buttered Celery
Maple Syrup Muffins
Apple Pie or Pudding Coffee

THE RECIPE calls for shell macaroni, but the ordinary macaroni may be used in place of the shell if you prefer.

Shell Macaroni with Brown Butter Sauce — Ingredients: one-half pound shell macaroni, one-third cup butter, one teaspoon lemon juice, salt and paprika to taste. Cook macaroni in boiling salted water until tender, drain and arrange on a serving platter. Serve with the butter that has been browned and combined with the lemon juice, paprika and salt.

Maple Syrup Muffins — Ingredients: one egg, one-half cup milk, one-half cup maple syrup, one-fourth cup melted butter, two cups flour, four teaspoons baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt. Beat egg till light. Blend in the milk, syrup and butter. Sift flour, baking powder and salt and stir into liquid mixture. Pour into greased muffin pans and bake 20 minutes at 400° F. Makes 12 muffins.

They Take the Words Out of Your Mouth

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

WE PARENTS sometimes slip grammatically. Perhaps we revert to some bad form of expression learned in early childhood. When we are on guard, we may be very accurate in this matter. Sometimes, however, we may not be quite sure about the correctness of the form of statement we wish to make.

The four verbs which seem to bother people most are sit, set, lie, lay and their different forms.

If we parents use them wrong, our children surely will. Here is some practice for you. Read these correct sentences over and over and make other sentences like them.

Correct Usage

It is hard to sit still. Nervous children should lie down for several minutes before the evening meal. The child sat beside his mother.

Little Ossie lay still for 15 minutes before he went to sleep. A good baby often sits or lies alone amusing himself. Yesterday the spoiled child lay on the floor bumping his head.

Too bad every mother cannot lie down every afternoon for a nap. The spoiled child climbed upon the table and sat upon the butter. After little Nora had lain on her bed for an hour she got up to play. The baby has been lying for half an hour without any cover in a cold room.

The infant lay and kicked and talked to himself. When Ned is very naughty, his mother makes him sit in a chair for 20 minutes. You can make a child lie down but you can't make him go to sleep. Orpha's mother lies down for a nap every afternoon. Never set a pan of water where the baby can reach it.

The wise mother laid the little child with the tantrum on the floor and walked away from him. After he had lain there for a few minutes he recovered.

Good Speech at Home

If a child hears good speech at home, he will choose on his own accord to use good English when he is about 12 or 14. And if he doesn't hear good English at home, what sense is there in correction by his parents?

When your child makes an error in English, don't scold him, nor laugh at him. Kindly, quietly say the correct statement for him. You should rarely even do so much; certainly not if your intrusion should vex him. At many times it will be well to say nothing to the child about his English errors.

All the Myers' children, especially the boys, use the double negative freely at home and without correction between the ages of about six and 12. After that they chose, on their initiative, to abandon it and other childish forms of speech.

LEGION UPSETS RANGERS

end of the first period and 12 to 11 for the Legion at half time. The end of the third period saw the score 18 to 15 for the Legion and when the excitement had quieted down, the score book showed that the Legion had a one-point victory, 20 to 19.

Everybody sat back in their seats for the second round in which the Eagles defeated Mosquto, 47 to 10. It was 9 to 2 at the quarter, 24 to 5 at the half, 32 to 6 at the three-quarter post.

Snowline's rapidly increasing strength seemed to indicate that Mac's Jumbos might be heading into a storm, but the fans were not so sure of it when the first quarter ended 6 to 6. The Jumbos were trailing at half time, however, 17 to 11.

Their supporters took on renewed enthusiasm when the three-quarter count showed the teams tied at 20 points, but the racket only had the effect of making Snowline travel like a scared rabbit, to take six points as against one for the Jumbos.

NEW CAR CHEVROLET SALES SHOW INCREASE FOR EARLY JANUARY

DETROIT, — In spite of unfavorable weather conditions prevailing over much of the country, retail sales of new cars and trucks totalled 21,998 units, as against 14,018 in the same period in 1939, W. E. Holler, general sales manager, announces here today. This represents a gain of 46.5 per cent, one of the largest registered in any 10-day period since announcement of the 1940 models.

Sales of trucks, Mr. Holler said, totalled 4,282, as compared with 3,323 in the first 10 days of last year.

Used car sales in the first 10 days also showed gains over 1939, the figures indicate. In the first 10 days of January, 32,919 used cars were sold, as against 29,539 in the same period last year.

In an action on file Wednesday morning in Superior Court, Frances Richards brings suit for divorce from Frank B. Richards. The complaint states the couple wed at San Jose in 1919 and separated on January 3, last; that there is no community and that there is no community property. Cruelty is alleged.

Foresters End Conference

Forestry; Woodbridge Metcalf, extension forester, and his assistant, Ralph Walts, of Berkeley, and Farm Advisor Ivan Lilley.

The conference understood that the establishment of a limited number of test and demonstration areas in the state was contemplated by the state committee and recommended that one of such areas be designated in El Dorado County.

Such a program, it was indicated, might be carried out with the assistance of the Soil Conservation Service, the Agricultural Extension sion Service and the State Division of Forestry working with co-operating farmers in the area designated, looking toward the establishment of improved practices in forest management.

Members of the California Canning Peach Association received $48,000 recently on their 1938 crop.

FIRE DAMAGES ASKED BY TWO FARM CREDIT INSTITUTIONS

The Federal Land Bank at Berkeley and the Sacramento Production Credit Association are plaintiffs in an action on file Wednesday morning in Superior Court against the Southern Pacific Company and the Davenport Fuel Company.

The complaint charges that the negligence of the railroad company was responsible for a fire which swept a portion of the ranch of J. H. and Estella Bullard on or about August 2, 1938, destroying timber, fences and wood in which the plaintiffs have an interest.

Damages of $1,546 are asked by the land bank and damages of $2,636.34 for cut wood alleged burned are asked by the Sacramento Production Credit Association. The Davenport Fuel Company is called upon to set forth whatever claims it may have to the cut wood.

Extradition Asked For Two By Olson

SACRAMENTO (UP)—Gov. Culbert Olson today requested extradition from Tulsa, Okla., of Lester Bonsworth, on charges of violating probation imposed in 1938 on two counts of grand theft in Santa Barbara county. Olson also requested return of Ted Hollingshead from Charleston, W. Va., to face a rape charge in San Francisco.
